

Professional Disciplinary Proceedings

Danziger & Markhoff LLP can help with all aspects of professional disciplinary proceedings for healthcare professionals.

Healthcare providers need experienced legal guidance through every step of a professional license investigation and/or proceeding. From the moment contact is made by the Office of Professional Medical Conduct ("OPMC") for physicians, the Office of Professional Discipline ("OPD") for other healthcare providers, or the Justice Center on behalf of certain patient populations, specific steps should be taken to protect yourself. Whether it is a "simple" request for a patient record, a notice that an investigation is being conducted, a request for an interview, or a notice that charges are being brought, legal representation is necessary and usually expected on the part of these investigative bodies. New York State is mandated to investigate every complaint against a healthcare provider, no matter the source. Outcomes can be the closure of the file after an investigation, to a censure and reprimand, a monetary fine, a license restriction or complete revocation of a license. No matter how minor the discipline, the repercussions can be very significant.

D&M attorneys have the experience to ensure a fair process from the beginning and an outcome with the least possible repercussions. Do not try to handle this type of matter without experienced counsel no matter how sure you are that there is nothing to hide!
